BANYAN TREE ANGSANA CASSIA

Soul Food, as its name suggests, will see guests being served authentic Indonesian delicacies with ingredients sourced locally and prepared the traditional way. Banyan Tree believes that soil-to-table cuisine honours local heritage and culture, and delivers more than just nourishment to the body - it is food that comforts the soul. The soul food weekend* at Banyan Tree Bintan will begin with a trip to collect 'Gong Gong' by the beach, a visit to an eco-farm and local market. With these ingredients, guests will be treated to a sunset cooking demonstration as chef Steven Hill lends his expertise in Indonesian cuisine by carefully curating a selection of evergreen favourites and new delights. The weekend will culminate in a communal dinner on the beach where guests sit around a large bonfire with a BBQ pit fired by coconut shells. To complement your meal, an array of salads & condiments served in clay pots and woven banana leaves will also be available.

*Book your stay on 20 and/or 21 November 2015 and enjoy the Soul Food weekend extravaganza to commemorate our 20 years. Identical activities will be held on 20 and 21 November 2015.
